Section G (4 x 1m)

Read the passage carefully. Then answer questions 41 to 47.

Your answers must be based on the passage.

Once upon a time, there lived a king who had enormous feet. They were so big that no shoes could fit them. Shoemakers could never find enough leather to make the shoes.

The poor king was tired of walking around in his bare feet. He ordered that whoever could make shoes to fit his feet would be rewarded with one hundred pieces of gold.

Nobody had any idea what to do about the king's feet except for a woodcutter. He quickly set to work.

A week later, the woodcutter was ready. He pulled along a large heavy box on wheels. No one could see inside the box because it was above eye level.

The woodcutter pulled the box to the palace. The anxious king expected the shoes to be small and tight like all the others. When the shoes were taken out, everyone was shocked, for it was a pair of wooden shoes! The king was surprised.

The wooden shoes were a perfect fit and the king smiled for he was very pleased with them. He asked the woodcutter, "These shoes fit so perfectly that I need not wear socks with them. What do you call these wooden shoes?"

"I made them out of ...," said the woodcutter. He wanted to say "logs" but he was so nervous that he said "clogs". From then on, those types of shoes were known as clogs.

Tick the correct answer in the box.
