It was a warm day at the shores of the Italian Riviera. Fierce wind has begun to lift and swirl the surface of the sea. Mas, a large black dog and her owner, Pilenga, scanned the horizon and saw a fleet of colourful sailing boats heading towards the port. In the rough water, the crew of one boat struggled to manoeuvre against the direction of the wind, but their boat moved closer to the jagged rocks on the wrong side of the barrier before the harbour. Pilenga and his shaggy companion braced for action. As Pilenga clambered quickly along slippery rocks, Mas followed close on his heels, barking excitedly. When they reached the end of the jetty, they leapt into the waves and swam towards the floundering sailing boat.

The following is the winning entry of last year's Poster Design Competition.

Spreading the Love for Endangered Animals

Cuddly Baby Pandas

Pandas start out small — about the size of a stick of butter. The mother panda cares for her young until they are ready to venture out on their own. It does not leave the den when the cubs are still young.

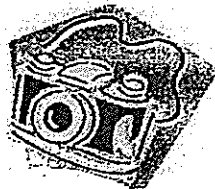

The panda cubs are nursed until about 18 months of age, but will begin to eat bamboo at about 7 to 9 months. Pandas spend over 12 hours a day eating.

Funny Baby ~~Pygmy~~ Slow Loris

The pygmy slow loris is nocturnal. It sleeps in the day while gripping a branch with its hands and feet. Its grasp is so strong that the animal can hang by one leg and feed in this position.

The name 'loris' comes from the Dutch word for clown, which describes the animal's wide-open eyes and facial markings and its acrobatic and comical positions as it moves about. When confronted, the loris will usually 'freeze' in mid-movement.

Your poster should include:

- drawings or photographs of baby animals
- interesting information about 2 to 3 species of endangered baby animals

For each question from 21 to 28, shade your answer (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet (OAS).

21. The main aim of the poster design competition is to _____.

- 1) encourage children to design beautiful posters
- 2) promote the photography of endangered animals
- 3) introduce children to the Institute of Animal Protection
- 4) encourage children to find out more about endangered animals

22. Which of the following is not a requirement of the competition?

- 1) Participants must be children above 4 years old.
- 2) Participants must draw pictures of three baby animals.
- 3) Participants must send in their entries by 25 July 2014.
- 4) Participants must provide information of at least 2 endangered animals

23. The champion of the poster design competition will receive _____.

- 1) $5000 cash voucher and Arts Friends membership
- 2) $5000 cash and a free membership of Rochaii Cafe
- 3) $5000 cash and a photograph taken with a baby animal
- 4) $5000 cash voucher and a free membership of Randai Zoo

24. Participants are to register and submit their entries _____.

- 1) by calling Jenny Tay at 9885 3367
- 2) by emailing the poster to babyanimals@gmail.com.sg
- 3) at the Singapore Randai Zoo Customer Service Counter
- 4) at the Institute of Animal Protection Customer Service Counter

25. Panda cubs stop drinking milk when they are about _____.

- 1) 7 months
- 2) 9 months
- 3) 16 months
- 4) 18 months

26. _____ is not a sponsor of the Poster Design Competition.

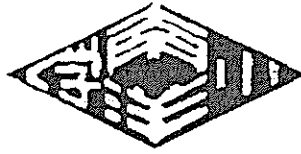

- 1) Rochaii Café
- 2) Arts Friends Pte Ltd
- 3) Singapore Randai Zoo
- 4) Institute of Animal Protection

27. Why is the loris named after the Dutch word 'clown'?

- 1) It sleeps in the day and has strong grasp.
- 2) It has wide-open eyes and facial markings.
- 3) It stops moving when confronted in mid-air.
- 4) It can hang by one leg and sleep in this position.

28. Which of the following statement is TRUE?

- 1) The pygmy slow lorises are active at night and sleeps in the day.
- 2) The mother panda usually leaves their den to find bamboo for her cubs.
- 3) The pygmy slow lorises and the giant pandas eat both plants and animals.
- 4) The giant pandas eat bamboo and butter when it is about 7 to 9 months old.

Section I: Comprehension (20m)

Read this passage and answer questions 71 to 80.

When the phone call came through, it took but a moment to dash the hope I held for days. "I am sorry," said the manager. "However, the other applicant was more suitable for the job." Upset with the news, I left a note for my absent wife telling her what had happened and went for a stroll to clear my head. Accompanied by my dog, Peanuts, I headed for the beach, wallowing in self-pity.

All of a sudden, Peanuts started barking like crazy. Distracted, I looked up to see what was happening. To my astonishment I saw a large creature lying at the water's edge about 100 metres away. Its bulk and colour led me to believe that it was a dead shark. Peanuts was standing just a few metres away from it, barking furiously.

As I approached, I could see the unmistakable tail of a dolphin. Inspecting it further I was surprised to see the blunt shape of its head. A little whale! It was roughly 2.5 metres long, but must have weighed between 200 and 300 kilogrammes. I examined it closely but saw no evidence of injury. Then, noticing what might have been an eye on its blunt head, I leaned in for a closer look. Suddenly, it opened, blowing wet air in my face. Not an eye, but a spout. It was breathing!

Shocked and excited, my first thought was to rescue it. I did not think I could move it by myself, but I was alone on the beach and more than three kilometres from town. There was no choice: I knew I had to do something. I decided to try to roll it. What an effort! It was a backbreaking task, but I was making great progress in rolling it a few times. However, a giant wave picked the whale up and pushed it back, despite my efforts to brace against it.

Dejected, I fell backwards underneath the whale and, as the water receded, found myself in a sitting position with the baby whale in my lap. I could not move. When the next wave began to roll in, I could feel the panic rising inside me as the water quickly surged up to my chin, engulfing me. I took a deep breath and went under.

Luckily the whale became buoyant and I was able to scramble out from under it. I quickly turned it face first into the oncoming waves. It worked! With each rising wave, I slowly pushed the hapless creature further into the deeper water until it was floating. When the next big wave came, I was horrified to see it turned sideways again, and heading back to the shallows. I waited until we were between waves so I planted my feet firmly in the sand and then I gave it an enormous shove. It went under the next wave and surfaced a few metres away. "Yes!" I cried, as I watched it move into deeper water. Exhausted but thrilled, I made my way up the beach and watched.

The whale was not in any immediate trouble so I decided to run home and grab my wetsuit, intending to dive to make sure it did not beach again. Arriving home, I peeled off my wet clothes and donned my wetsuit. "What are you doing?" my wife asked. "Saving a life! We have to go!" I replied. Explaining the situation as we sped up the beach, I saw the whale and pointed. It was floating, resting and apparently safe. I was overjoyed. As we sat whale-watching in the fading light, my wife started saying how sorry she was that I had missed out on the job. By then, I had forgotten about it. "It doesn't matter anymore," I said smiling. Suddenly, what I had accomplished that day seemed far more important.
