One common false belief about vegetarian food is that it is healthier. For example, in a vegetarian
tofu pie, the pastry surrounding the lump of tofu can cancel out many health benefits the tofu may provide. In addition, meat substitutes such as gluten may require strong flavouring and can be high in salt. Some contain more than twice the level of saturated fat that is often found in meat.

(23)

Another deficiency of a vegetarian diet is the absence of dairy foods that contain vitamin B12 (24).
and calcium. This can cause severe irreversible damage to the nervous system. While many studies suggest that a vegetarian diet is good, there is no evidence to support that it helps to reduce the risk of stomach, breast and lung cancer in vegetarians.

Read the passage below and answer questions 26 to 30.

If you cringe at the thought of climbing a 1,000 m-high hill, double amputee Mark Inglis will put you to shame. Last year, the New Zealander became the first man to conquer the 8,848 metre high Mount Everest on two artificial limbs. "When people see me, they see a double amputee. But when I see myself, I see a person who will never get frostbite on my legs again," the 47-year old half joked.

The competitive cyclist and former search and rescue climber lost his legs 24 years ago due to frostbite while climbing New Zealand's Mount Cook. Trapped in an ice cave with his partner, they were rescued after two weeks but the badly frostbitten legs had to be amputated below the knee.

Still he fulfilled his childhood dream on May 15 last year when he finally reached the summit of Everest along with 10 other climbers. "Climbing Everest is very tough. Just getting up in the middle of the night and putting your boots on can already make you dizzy," he said. "But it is far harder for a double amputee. When you climb, the knee hurts a lot, you just have to go on."

A heart-stopping accident happened during his climb to the summit when he stumbled and a part of his artificial leg snapped off. He simply replaced it with another leg. He laughed it off by commenting that the number one rule is to always carry a spare leg. His jovial demeanour belied the demons, like hallucinations, heart attacks and of course frostbite that he and other climbers had to battle against to get to the top.

15

He assured that he went for the expedition with his family's blessings and his eyes wide open to the dangers of Everest. Conquering Everest is a bittersweet success. He had to deal with wide-spread criticism of failing to help a dying British climber while ascending Everest. The climber, David Sharp, eventually died on the mountain. However, Mark explains that at 8,000m it's not possible to help anyone.

20

These days, he would not be scaling any more large mountains. Instead, he is actively involved in a charity that he founded, Limbs4All, which aimed at helping disabled people. "Climbing Everest is just a hill on the journey of life," he says thoughtfully. "It helps you understand yourself better, then gives you power to go on."

25

Adapted from Straits Time, Life Section: Happy Feet

26. If you cringed at the thought of climbing Mount Everest, you would _____.

- (1) do it in future
- (2) look forward to it
- (3) stay away from doing it
- (4) dread doing it but will attempt it anyway

27. Mark had both his legs amputated because he _____.
- (1) got lost
 - (2) suffered from the frostbite
 - (3) was trapped in the ice cave
 - (4) was trying to rescue another climber
28. "His jovial demeanour belied the demons" in line 16 means Mark's cheerfully hid his _____.
- (1) evil thoughts
 - (2) difficulties in overcoming the obstacles
 - (3) intention to battle against the other climbers
 - (4) fear for the demons residing in the mountain
29. What does it in line 12 refer to?
- (1) Climbing Mount Everest.
 - (2) Having frostbite on your knee.
 - (3) Keeping abreast with the other climbers.
 - (4) Putting on your boots in the middle of the night.
30. Which of the following statements about Mark Inglis is NOT true?
- (1) He is no longer climbing mountains.
 - (2) He managed to fulfill his childhood dream.
 - (3) He lost his legs while climbing New Zealand's Mount Cook.
 - (4) He saved the British climber who died while ascending Everest.

Plants have one human-like ~~ph~~characteristic. As scientist Dr. Burke Reynolds, recently discovered. They communicate to one another for different reasons just like humans do. These (42)
(41)
plants use a range of chemical ~~siknely~~ which they emit to alert other plants of danger.

(43)
"If a caterpillar or even a koala ~~starte~~ started ~~shewing~~ chewing on a plant, the plant will send
(44) (45)
chemicals to its leaves in an effort to defence itself," Dr Burke explains. "Plants around them will be able to antizipate a similar attack after ricieving these signals. They will in turn release

(46)
(47) (48)
the neacesary chemicals to protect themselves. Dr Burke also writes about another unusal characteristic of plants that use the same chemicals to attract certain insects to protect them.

Scientists have identified the genes responsible for this mechanism. This discovery has been published in science journals. It was surgested that gardeners and farmers may not have (50)
(49)
to use pesticides in the future. If these genes are transplant to other plants, vast amounts of pesticides will not have to be used to protect them anymore.

Comprehension Open-Ended (10 x 2marks)

Read the passage below and then answer Questions 71 to 80.

When a teacher mentions “Flag Day” to a class, we heard a collective inward groan from many in the class. That day, my friend and I, who were new to this, were asked to volunteer for flag day by our teacher. Our immediate reaction was to come up with the best excuse to get out of the dreaded task. However, our teacher was very persuasive. That Saturday, we found ourselves standing along Orchard Road,

The heat was sweltering. The mission was daunting. We had been in the heat for four hours only to have our cans half-filled with street-sourced donations. No matter how sunny our smiles were, we failed to warm the hearts of most passers-by. We even shook our cans but most passed us by without a glance. Our last resort was to approach the potential donors. Our efforts were met with cold stares. What was worse, some even waved us away as if we were flies on their food! We were crestfallen. Who would have known that collecting change from fellow Singaporeans for a good cause was going to be this difficult? We realised then that this was not just a dreaded task anymore but a burden many had refused to bear.

10

Our faces brightened up when finally, one of the passers-by we approached smiled and reached into his pockets. “Ah, a potential donor! After all that begging,” we thought. But to our dismay, all he did was to show us the flag-sticker as proof of his prior donation to a lucky can holder. Disappointed, we turned away and walked towards the nearby food court. Another hour had passed and our cans were still nowhere near filled.

15

We wanted to leave and return our cans in defeat. In fact, Karen, my equally disappointed partner, wanted to fill the can with her own money, but it hardly made any difference. We stood sullenly for awhile. Karen related a recent article she read about this being a fruitless project to raise funds for the needy. Strangely, as we lamented our fate and groused at the miserliness of our fellow Singaporeans, coins started clinking into our cans! Apparently, there was a heavy traffic of passers-by then heading to and from the food court since it was about lunch time. We could not keep up with the flow but neither of us was complaining. Our smiles returned and all sense of hopelessness and despair were replaced with pure joy and relieve. Our cans were filling up and our efforts were not in vain! Our enthusiasm grew tremendously and we became bolder. Karen and I even approached the potential donors with more conviction—we actually believed in our cause and the donors could sense it. In return, the donations came in more briskly and the cans clinked even more loudly.

20

30

Despite the heat, the long hours spent and the occasional humiliation we had to endure, we were glad we actually stayed till our cans were filled. This task which we felt was a burden at first, proved to be a meaningful activity. With the right attitude, correct location, patience and true sincerity to help the needy, we understood that Flag Day was truly for a very important cause.

35

ALL ANSWERS MUST BE IN COMPLETE SENTENCES.

71. Did the writer and her friend want to volunteer for Flag Day?
Give an evidence to support your answer. (Do not quote from the passage.)

72. Was the teacher successful in getting the writer and her friend to volunteer?
Quote a sentence that tells you this.

73. What two things did the writer and her friend do to earn donations from the passers-by?

74. Use one word to describe what the passers-by thought of the volunteers.
Support your choice of word with evidence from Paragraph 2.

75. "Our faces brightened up when finally, one of the passers-by we approached smiled and reached into his pockets." Why do you think the passer-by smiled?

76. The writer and her friend were "disappointed" line 18. Quote the phrase that tells you this.

77. What did the writer and her friend mean when they wanted to give their cans back "in defeat"?

78. There ^{was} a sudden increase in the volume of passers-by near lunch time. Who were ^{the} also-donors? Give two pieces of evidence to support your answer.

79. What are the 3 obstacles the volunteers faced in this task?

80. State what their "cause" mentioned in line 36 was? Why was it meaningful?
