Read the passage below and answer the questions carefully.

Blue Field and Little Ivywood were two villages that had a river separating them. The villagers built a wooden bridge that linked the two villages so that they could go to the other village to buy and sell their things.

One day, Ana wanted to go to Little Ivywood to sell her ducks. When she was halfway across the narrow bridge, she realised that a boy was walking towards her with his cow.

"There isn't enough space for the both of us to cross!" yelled Ana. However, the boy pretended not to hear her and continued to walk towards her. Frustrated, Ana stood firmly and folded her arms. The boy stopped in front of her with his cow and refused to give way.

"I will not let you pass! I was here first, so you should let me pass!" demanded Ana. The boy shrugged and tugged at his cow, trying to squeeze past Ana. Suddenly, they heard a loud crack and felt the bridge move under them. Without warning, the bridge collapsed and they fell into the river.

"See what you've done!" Ana cried angrily as her ducks swam away.
