Ten-year-old Jack had just finished watching a television programme on killer whales. He had learnt many interesting facts about the killer whales. Jack had thought that killer whales were like sharks. He was surprised to learn that they were part of the dolphin family and would usually not hurt anyone.

The killer whale was black with a straight fin. There was a white patch behind its eye. Its underside is white. Jack was attracted to its colour as it stood out among the other sea creatures. Its colour helped it to hunt in the sea. As it was black on top, it was difficult for the sea creatures to spot it from the surface of the water. The white colour on the bottom of its body made it look bright with the rays of the sun. In this way it is difficult to see them from below the deep sea.

Jack enjoyed watching the killer whale move in and out of water. Although it was big and heavy, it seemed to move with grace. However, he was sad to hear that sometimes killer whales were killed by man because of the food the whales eat.
