Section G: Comprehension (Short Response)

Read the passage carefully and answer questions 35 to 39.

(6 marks)

Once there lived a slave called Markos who yearned to be set free by his master since he was treating him badly. Thus, Markos hatched a plan and escaped into a nearby forest. After travelling for a while, Markos suddenly heard a roar and found a lion standing close by. He was sure the lion was going to kill him. Instead, the lion slowly limped towards him and held out its paw. There was a huge thorn stuck to its paw and it was bleeding badly. 5

Markos took pity on the lion. Carefully, he removed the thorn from its paw and the lion walked away peacefully into the forest. Unfortunately, after a few days, Markos was captured by his master who was furious that he had escaped. The master decided to throw Markos to a lion as it was common practice in ancient Greece where slaves were often thrown into an arena to fight a starving lion. 10

A huge crowd gathered to witness the fight. The king was also present. A lion that had been starved for a number of days was brought to the arena in a cage. After Markos was brought into the arena, the lion was let out of the cage. Markos was trembling with fear as the lion rushed at him with great rage. 15

Much to the astonishment of the crowd, the lion stopped and looked intently at Markos and then lay at his feet. Markos was delighted as he realised that it was the same lion that he had helped. He hugged the lion as the crowd watched in stunned silence. The king was amazed to see the courageous act and permitted Markos to be freed. 20

(10 marks)

A mother, wishing to encourage her son's progress at the piano although he was not good at it, bought tickets to a performance by the great Polish pianist, Ignace Paderewski. Her son was very excited about going for the performance. When evening arrived, they found their seats near the front of the concert hall and eyed the majestic piano waiting on the stage. Soon, the mother found a friend to talk to and the boy slipped away 5

The lights in the auditorium began to dim and the spotlights came on. The audience became very quiet as they waited for Ignace Paderewski to come on stage. Only then did the boy's mother notice her son up on the piano bench, innocently playing 'Twinkle Twinkle Little Star'. She gasped in shock and embarrassment. However, before she 10 could bring her son back, the master himself appeared on stage and quickly moved to the piano.

He whispered gently to the boy, "Don't quit. Keep playing." Leaning over, Ignace Paderewski reached down with his left hand and began filling in the bass part. Then, his right arm reached around the other side and improvised the simple children's song, 15 making it a delightful tune. Together, the old master and the young novice held the crowd mesmerised with their blended and beautiful music.

At the end of their performance, the little boy went back to his mother and told her that he would never give up on learning to play the piano. That brought tears to her eyes and she turned to look at Ignace Paderewski. When their eyes met, he nodded his head 20 slightly and smiled.
