The pale moon hung in the black tapestry of the night sky. Below it, the landscape was bathed in a silvery glow. Little Mina curled up in bed. Outside the window, a cricket sang intermittently, breaking the silence of the night every now and then with its lullaby. "Where are your companions? Are they all asleep?" Mina whispered. The cricket chirped its sad reply. She nodded in understanding. She had trouble falling asleep too.

Then Mina remembered the mythical character in European folklore, Sandman, who sprinkled sand into the eyes of a child to induce sleep and dreams. "Mister Sandman, work your magic on us!" Mina chanted. Soon, a sense of drowsiness overwhelmed her. "Good night! Sweet dreams!" she slurred.

Our Story

The passion in card collection runs in my family. It originated from my grandfather who was a sailor on a British-owned merchant ship. On his first voyage in 1947, after disembarking from the ship, he wandered the streets of Liverpool, England to look for a souvenir for my grandmother back in Singapore. There he found the best gift for her – a postcard bearing a photographic image of the wharf where his ship had anchored. He wanted to give her a glimpse of England. She was fascinated by the image of the foreign land on the postcard. From then on, he made it his mission to collect postcards from every place he visited. They contain memories of his travels.

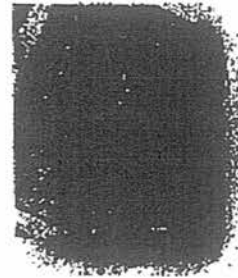

My father caught the enthusiasm for postcards and expanded the collection with those picked up from his overseas vacations. They have been stored in acid-free albums which help to preserve the vivid printing and paper through the decades. These photo postcards which date back to the 1940s have great historical value. It would be a pity to keep my inheritance of postcards framed up on the plain walls of my living room. Thus, the idea of a gallery to showcase my prized possession was birthed.

Our shop is well-stocked with cards of every art form – vintage, pop art, cartoon, etc. Whether you are looking for collectible cards, seeking inspiration for your art project or simply wanting to buy a birthday card, we welcome you to The House of Cards!

Although plastic shopping bags are cheap and useful, their disposal causes widespread pollution. That is _____ the non-biodegradable polyethylene which plastic is made of takes centuries to decompose. Now, we may have an unlikely ally to help clean up our trash – a small wax worm.

Dr Federica Bertocchini, a biologist, stumbled _____ the worm's hidden (30)
skills by accident two years ago. Being _____ amateur beekeeper, she was (31)
cleaning out her beehives that had become infested with wax worms. She removed the worms and put them in a plastic bag. Later, she went back to the room _____ (32)
she had left the worms, and found that they were everywhere. They had escape from the bag even _____ it had been closed. In fact, the bag was full of holes. There was _____ one explanation: the worms had made the holes to escape.
(33)
(34)

Realising that it _____ be an important discovery, Dr Bertocchini (35)
teamed up with two other biologists to conduct further research. They placed one hundred worms on some polyethylene and discovered that each was able to create _____ two holes per hour. The researchers estimated that _____
(36) (37)

this rate, the group of worms could decompose an average-sized 5.5-gram plastic bag within a month.

However, the team _____ not planning to deploy worm armies to (38)
landfills. Instead, it wants to identify the enzyme in the worm that helps degrade the plastic and produce it on a large scale.

Cappuccino. Diarrhoea. Reminiscent.

Raphael stared at the words on the list with the focus of a sniper, burning the images into his mind. "I _____ be crowned the champion speller for this year," he said confidently. He _____ himself lifting the trophy over his head jubilantly with his arch-rival, Augustine Lim, watching in envy. His lips curled into a _____ at that mental picture.

(51)
(53)
This was Raphael's third appearance at the Annual National Spelling Championship grand _____. He was one of the twenty contestants who _____ it through to this decisive round. It was just minutes away from the _____ of the contest. Seated at the first row of the auditorium, they were still furiously _____ the spelling of the foreign words on their lists at the eleventh hour. _____ their outward calm, each of them felt a mixture of excitement and nerves.

Two years ago, Raphael had stood on the stage which was in front of him now.

"Spell 'connoisseur'."

So he did, and everyone waited with bated breath for the confirmation.

Then the desired answer from the host came: "That is _____!" With that, he carried the trophy victoriously home.

Unfortunately, last year, he had lost the trophy to Augustine Lim after slipping _____ on the spelling for "nemesis". In his haste to spell the word, he had replaced the letter "i" with _____ "e", changing the word to the plural form.

(61)
"Ah! I've won by the skin of my teeth! I wasn't sure of the spelling of 'nemesis' at _____, but you have given me a big hint! Thank you very much!" Augustine mocked.

Months later, Raphael was still beating himself up over that _____ . However, experience is the best teacher; he resolved to spell the given word _____ and carefully this time instead of rushing it through.
(64)

Just then, the host made an announcement for the contestants to take their seats on the stage. The moment of truth had arrived! With trembling fingers, Raphael shoved the word list _____ his bag nervously.
(65)

As the group _____ being herded up the stage, Raphael and Augustine found each other. As their eyes locked, a silent exchange of words took place – may the best man win!

Section I – Comprehension Open-ended (20 marks)

Read this passage and answer questions 71 to 80.

With practised ease, Rose bundled the tall stack of newspapers with a raffia string. She set it beside the gate for the rag-and-bone man later, in return for a few cents. Turning to her preschooler, she chirped, "Come on, Vick, let's go and feed Blue Dolphin, shall we?" She picked up two cloth bags stuffed with used containers and placed Vick's contribution into his little hands – a plastic juice bottle. "Let's go!" he chimed merrily.

5

Rose strode towards the blue four-wheeled recycling bin, with Vick bounding beside her like a puppy. Making a trip to recycle household items had been her weekly routine for the past ten years. Vick, young as he was, had also come on board the family's green initiative.

10

When they were nearing the bin, a foul odour wafted into their nostrils. Vick's chubby face puckered and asked, "What's that smell, Mommy?" Rose looked into the mouth of the bin hesitantly, half expecting to see a dead rat among the recyclables. Instead, sitting on top of the heap was the soggy leftover of some chicken rice, lying exposed on a leaf of brown wax paper.

15

"Somebody has thrown food into Blue Dolphin, and it's rotting and giving off a bad smell!" Rose answered, crinkling her nose in disgust. Holding her breath, she picked up the offensive item gingerly and threw it into the waste bin where it rightfully belonged. "Goodness gracious! Whoever did this is terribly irresponsible!" she muttered.

20

Indeed, two days later, Rose caught the likely culprit red-handed. She was nearby the recycling bin when she noticed a plump lady in her fifties standing by the blue bin, finishing off her chicken wing. Then she tossed the oily bones into the bin and waddled away, licking the grease off her fingers as she did so. Rose thought, "I don't think she knows that the recyclables must be in good condition for them to be recycled." Feeling disturbed, Rose decided to give her a piece of her mind.

25

"You know that this is a recycling bin, not a waste bin, right?" Rose asked. The lady, whom Rose later knew as Aunt Suzie, responded with a puzzled look. "Look, these are recyclables contributed by the residents; they are not rubbish! You are undoing all our efforts towards recycling," Rose reiterated. Aunt Suzie's eyes widened in surprise. This was the first time she had heard the information. Meekly, she reached into the bin and retrieved the bones.

30

"You see, food scraps will attract insects. When they rot, paper will get contaminated and cannot be recycled. The bin will also become smelly," Rose explained, trying to educate her on the maintenance of the recycling bin. In response, Aunt Suzie merely shrugged and mumbled an "okay". Sadly, Rose knew that her words had fallen on deaf ears.

35

A week later, the women met again at the same recycling bin. Aunt Suzie was about to throw an apple core into the bin when she felt a tap on her shoulder. She blushed when she saw Rose's piercing stare. Thankfully, Vick provided a timely distraction by showing her his handcraft – an airplane made out of a cereal box. "See, my airplane. I use recycled materials," Vick uttered, slowing down at the difficult words, "to save the trees!" His innocent face lit up with pride. 40

Aunt Suzie's face turned red. She finally saw the light. Even a child could see the need to protect natural resources. In comparison, her indifference was shameful. Looking at the apple core, she had a green idea. She could keep a compost jar to recycle organic waste! Spurred by a sense of mission, she hurried home. 45
