Forcing himself not to shrink back from the fiery scene, Jarrett searched through the overwhelming confusion for someone who might still be alive. But in just moments, a thick, filthy cloud engulfed him, leaving him choking and struggling for breath. Frightened, confused shouts from Joe and Angio told him that the cloud had also surrounded them.

"Keep together (13) Jarrett yelled, his voice hoarse, frantically hunting for a way out of the smoke. Then he saw two figures approaching him.

"Who are you?" Jarrett asked.

"I am Henry Reese and that's my father. We got burned out three nights ago."

"Are you saying you have been walking three days and nights (14) Jarrett echoed, horrified. "Were you lost?"

"I was," the boy said, "but I couldn't get Father to say if he knew where we were." He paused for a while (15) "Where are we now?" he asked.

"Within a mile or two of Slate Creek, I think," Jarrett said. Actually, he was lost himself, with no idea how far his crew had travelled.

Read the passage below and answer questions 26 to 30.

I was in for a surprise. When the time came for the long-jump trials, I was startled to see a tall boy hitting the pit at almost 7.9 metres on his practice leaps! He turned out to be a German named Luz Long. I was told that Hitler had kept him under wraps, evidently hoping to win the jump with him.

I guessed that if Long won, it would add some new support to the Nazis' superiority theory. After all, I am a Negro. A little hot under the collar about Hitler's ways. I was determined to go out there and really show Der Führer and his master race who was superior and who wasn't. 5

An angry athlete is an athlete who will make mistakes, as any coach will tell you. I was no exception. On the first of my three qualifying jumps, I leapt from several centimetres beyond the take-off board for a foul. On the second jump, I fouled even worse. 10

Walking a few metres from the pit, I kicked disgustedly at the ground. Suddenly, I felt a hand on my shoulder. I turned to look into the friendly blue eyes of the tall German long jumper. He had easily qualified for the finals on his first attempt. He offered me a firm handshake. 15

"Jesse Owens, I'm Luz Long. I don't think we've met." He spoke English well, though with a German twist to it. For the next few minutes we talked together. I didn't tell Long what was "eating" me, but he seemed to understand my anger, and he took pains to reassure me. Finally, seeing that I had calmed down, he pointed to the take-off board. 20

"Look," he said. "Why don't you draw a line a few inches at the back of the board and aim at making your take-off from there? What does it matter if you're not first in the trials? Tomorrow is what counts."

You can melt down all the gold medals and cups I have, and they wouldn't be plating on the 24-carat friendship I felt for Luz Long at that moment. I realised then, too, that Luz Long was the epitome of what Pierre de Coubertin, founder of the modern Olympic Games, must have had in mind when he said, "The important thing in the Games is not winning but taking part. The essential thing in life is not conquering but fighting well." 25

- (2) He was not as tall as his competitor.

27 Based on the passage, the phrase 'hot under the collar' (line 7) means being _____.

- (1) anxious
- (2) alarmed
- (3) annoyed
- (4) astonished

28 What could be a reason Jesse Owens's second attempt was also a foul?

- (1) He was feeling upset.

Most people would recognise asthma in a child or adult as attacks of wheezy breathlessness, sometimes on exirsjon, sometimes at rest, sometimes mild and other times severe. Some would relate them to specific triggers such as animals, fumes and pollens. Some may think of asthma as a condition of children, some as a condition able to affecting people of any age. While, some would regard it as an occasional nuisance, requiring intemitent treatment only, others see it as a persistent and significant problem needing continue treatment. Surely, they can't all be right?

(41)

(42)

(43)

(44)

(45)

(46)

The word 'asthma' is used as a blanket term to cover a condition karecterissed by episodes of breathlessness caused by narrowing of the bronchial tubes or airways within the lungs. There are many factors that contributed to the development of asthma in the first instance and many can induce attacks. In addition, these will vary among individuals. The best dafenetion is that asthma is a condition where the airways within the lungs are imfleimd and are sensitive to certain triggers.

(50)

These cause the airways to narrow thus reducing airflow in an individual made him or her breathless. Doctors use the term 'twitchy tubes'!

A frail old man went to live with his son, daughter-in-law, and a four-year-old grandson. His hands trembled, his _____ (51) was blurred and his step faltered. The family ate together nightly at the dinner table. However, the elderly grandfather's shaky hands and failing sight made eating rather _____ (52). Peas rolled off his spoon onto the floor. When he grasped the glass, often milk spilled on the tablecloth. The son and daughter-in-law became agitated by the _____ (53) he created. "We must do something about Grandfather," said the son. "I've had enough of his spilled milk, noisy eating and food on the floor." Therefore, the husband and wife set a small _____ (54) at the corner. There, Grandfather ate alone _____ (55) the rest of the family enjoyed together. Since Grandfather had _____ (56) a dish or two, his food was served in a wooden bowl. Sometimes, when the family glanced in Grandfather's _____ (57), they saw a tear in his eye as he ate alone. Still, the only words the couple had for him were _____ (58) admonitions when he dropped a fork or spilled food. The four-year-old watched _____ (59) all in silence.

One evening _____ (60) dinner, the father noticed his son playing with wood scraps on the floor. He asked the child sweetly, "What are you making?" The boy responded _____ (61) as pleasantly, "Oh, I am making a little bowl for you and mama to eat your food from when I grow up." The four-year-old smiled, then went back to work. The words so struck the parents that they were _____ (62). Tears started to stream down their cheeks. Though no _____ (63) were spoken, both knew what had to be done. That evening the husband took Grandfather's hand and gently _____ (64) him back to the family table.

For the remainder of his days, the elderly grandfather ate every _____ (65) with the family. For some reason, neither husband nor wife seemed to care any longer when a fork was dropped, milk spilled or the tablecloth was soiled.

There are many good things about having a goldfish for a pet. It teaches even a child responsibility. You don't have to walk it. It won't mess up the house. It doesn't shed. And one goldfish looks pretty much like another. This last trait is very important, I found, in light of the one bad thing about goldfish - they have a relatively short lifespan.

There are twelve years and two sisters between my oldest daughter, Anna and my youngest, Elliana. However, the two of them have always been close. So I wasn't surprised when it was Anna who solved the problem created by Elli's fear of the dark. We have four bedrooms in our house. When Elli graduated to bed at age two and a half, we moved her in with her next oldest sister, Kayla. That left the two oldest girls with their own rooms, much to their delight. While Elli was afraid of the dark, Kayla couldn't sleep with a light on. This led Anna to come up with something if she wanted to keep her personal space. The answer was a goldfish!

Anna bought Elli a bowl, a little plastic house for the fish to swim through, some coloured gravel and a small light that kept the little aquarium illuminated. Elli kept the bowl on the nightstand next to her bed. That way, she had enough light to make her feel safe and a "friend" to murmur to quietly before she fell asleep. The light from the fish bowl was dim enough so that Kayla wasn't bothered. And both of them liked having a pet.

Elli fed that fish like clockwork and reminded us to clean the bowl more often than we would have liked. She was always careful about adding the anti-chlorine drops to the fresh water, lest her fish die a toxic death. She also named her fish creatively. Some days the fish would be "Jaws", other days it would be "Swimmy". The fish's gender also varied according to my daughter's whim. Since goldfish don't live very long, all of us became co-conspirators in the game, making sure that Elli always had a live goldfish in that bowl. Every night when I kissed her goodnight, I would check the fish. I had found that Anna checked the fish, too, many times before she went to bed herself. If any of us noticed the fish looking a bit peaked around the gills, a quiet trip to the pet store was quickly scheduled.

When Elli turned six years old, Anna left for college. I was having a separation problem of my own sending my oldest off. Therefore, I was more apprehensive of Elli's reaction to that. One evening as I was putting the two little ones to bed, Elli said to me, "Mommy, when this fish dies, will Anna come home and get me a new one?" Alarmed at that, I asked her how long she had known that her goldfish was being replaced every time one died. Elli just shrugged. I asked if it bothered her that the current fish wasn't the same one her sister had bought a few years ago. She said it had never bothered her. Since it had made Anna happy to play the game that way, she had just gone along with that. And so, I understood. The little love token from one sister to another and back again was swimming happily beside my daughter's bed. The fish may not have been the original, but the message had never changed.
