LAST YEAR'S WINNING ENTRIES
THEME: SINGAPORE IN THE PAST

Tribute to Samsui Women by Lionel Chia

A clay sculpture created to pay tribute to the silent heroine who built Singapore – the Samsui women. These immigrant construction workers from China, with their synonymous red headgear, were resilient and hardworking.

Old Singapore River by Stephanie Lau

A water-colour painting of The Singapore River in the early 1900s with coolies moving goods to the godowns.

THIS YEAR'S THEME:
SIR STAMFORD RAFFLES AND THE FOUNDING OF SINGAPORE

While serving as the Governor-General of Bencoolen, Sir Stamford Raffles landed in Singapore in 1819. Its strategic location in the main trading route between British India and China as well as its natural deep harbours for big ships to anchor, made Singapore an ideal choice for a new trading post.

Having granted permission to develop a settlement on Singapore for the East India Company, Sir Stamford Raffles began to develop the island. He envisioned it as a free port with tolerance towards other cultures and a focus on education.

Old Map of Singapore

A stamp depicting an old map of Singapore.

Statue of Stamford Raffles

Raffles' 1st landing site on Singapore mainland is marked with his statue, located by the Singapore River, behind Parliament House.

Although the motivations of Sir Stamford Raffles were principally to do with the monetary advantages Singapore would bring to its employer, the East India Company, his actions laid the foundation for the initial development of Singapore as a country. Under his leadership, schools and churches in the local languages were constructed. Missionaries and businesses were allowed to flourish. At the same time, slavery, gaming and drug use were outlawed. In a few short years, Singapore went from a small settlement of about 1000 fishermen along the Singapore River to a thriving British colonial settlement.

Today, Singapore is a global commercial, financial and transportation hub. Often referred to as the Lion City, the Garden City and the Little Red Dot, it is also a popular destination for travel.

Jutting out of San Francisco Bay, Alcatraz Island is a must-see landmark in one of the world's favourite tourist destinations. _____ would nearly a million visitors a year take the short ferry ride _____ Fisherman's Wharf to this barren rock island known _____ its chilly winds and fog? (31)

They are drawn _____ the infamous history, the mystery and suspense created by the many movies and books about Alcatraz, and the morbid curiosity to see the damp and cramped cells _____ the most notorious criminals in the United States were incarcerated. The island played an important role _____ the formative years in the city _____ San Francisco. Alcatraz was the site of the first lighthouse built on the west coast and was also an important military fort protecting San Francisco Bay. (32) (33) (34) (35)

Alcatraz continues to be recognised _____ America's ultra-maximum security prison, but visitors should also become acquainted _____ the interesting early years of the island's heritage. The early buildings and history of Alcatraz _____ not as visible as the main cell block, _____ as dramatic as the tales of the famous prisoners and the escape attempts. However, they are just as exciting. (36) (37) (38)

Trevor Wallace knew that any ordinary Mother's Day gift would not impress his mother. Instead, he woke up early that day and hand-scrubbed a fountain in the wee hours of the morning.

Fifteen minutes away from Trevor's school was DeAnza Community College, where his grandmother had worked for decades. She was a learning disability instructor right up till the day she passed away due to cancer. 5

In her honour, her co-workers at the school dedicated a cement fountain with a plaque that stated 'Heart's Garden: In Memory of Marilyn Rosenthal'. This was special to Trevor's mother, Sarene. However, she lived six hours away and did not have any opportunity to visit it. 10

Over time, the fountain fell into disrepair. A cousin who worked at the college told Trevor and Sarene that vandals had broken the statue's bowl at its base and damaged adjacent cement benches. The water pump was clogged with leaves and the surrounding area was littered with debris.

Finally, one of the school keepers agreed to repair the fountain. He had remembered Marilyn Rosenthal for touching many lives. Once repaired, Sarene and Trevor made a trip to visit it. There, they posed together for a photograph. Sarene recalled, "We sat watching the fountain for a while, the water tinkling as it went into the bowls. It was so peaceful." 15

Though Trevor and his mother had not spoken about their visit to the fountain since then, he knew it was still precious to her. Trevor called Sarene that Sunday to wish her a 'Happy Mother's Day' and told her to expect a surprise. Then he drove to DeAnza Community College with his camera, tripod and two sponges. 20

When Trevor arrived at the fountain, he set up his camera on the tripod and took a shot of it. He started to scrub the fountain. As he cleaned, Trevor thought about how his mother would react when she received the surprise. Being in the moment of doing an act of service for someone he loved was therapeutic. It took him about two hours to clean up the best he could, removing the layers of dust and being careful around the fragile pieces. When he was done cleaning, he took another shot of the fountain. Trevor then sent his mother an e-mail with the photographs taken before and after the fountain was cleaned. 25 30

"When I opened the attachments, I burst into tears," Sarene said. Trevor said listening was a crucial component of his gift. Over the years he had paid attention to his mother's everyday mentions of the fountain, and of his grandmother. Sarene felt that in cleaning the fountain, Trevor had not only honoured her, but also her mother. 35
