Nelson Mandela was born as Rolihlahla Mandela on July 18, 1918, in the village of Qunu. Like many boys his age, little Mandela found it amusing to (16) tease animals, especially a donkey, which everyone knows, would never (17) fight back. So one day, Mandela and his friends took turns (18) climbing onto a donkey's back. When it was his turn, Mandela jumped on the animal's back and sped off for a nearby thornbush. The donkey, which everyone thought would never fight back, decided that there was nothing amusing about the boys' (19) antics and so it jerked its back and threw poor Mandela onto the prickly thorns! The thorns scratched Mandela's face and embarrassed him in front of his friends. Mandela learnt from then on that no one deserves to be humiliated, for it is the most cruel thing that can (20) happen to a person..He believed that everyone deserves to be treated fairly.

As a general rule, all vegetables, except what are known as 'leafy vegetables', need plenty of sunlight, rich soil and continuous feeding. Some of them are particularly suited for growing in containers. One of them (29) _____ the carrot.

You can grow several rows of carrots in a large pot (30) _____ have 2 to 3 in each smaller pot. Carrot plants prefer (31) _____ to be disturbed, so the seeds are sown in situ. (Sowing seeds in situ means planting them directly in the soil, as opposed (32) _____ transplanting seeds started indoors or in a nursery bed.) Make depressions in the soil 7 to 10 centimetres apart and sow 2 to 3 seeds in each.

(33) _____ a few true leaves appear, snip (34) _____ the weaker ones with a pair of sharp scissors and do it close to the soil surface. Do not disturb (35) _____ remaining plants (36) _____ trying to pull off the seedlings.

When carrot tops become visible on the surface of the soil, top up with more soil to prevent them (37) _____ developing green tops. In (38) _____ 2 to 3 months, you may be able to harvest sweet and tender carrots. Enjoy your carrots!

Dear Fellow Students,

at 255

I am writing on behalf of the School Fundraising Committee to encourage you to support our Fundraiser Sports Day. The proceeds of this event will contribute to our school's funds for the upgrading of the badminton hall and basketball court.

There will be money earned from the sale of entry tickets, sale of refreshments during the event, (39)  and orders for suvieners. As our school already has some equipment, we will plan the event base on (40)  (41)  the resources and facilities our school has so as not to incur any unnneseseri cost.

(42)  This event will also foster jenjune camaraderie amongst donors, students and staff of Sunflower (43)  (44)  Secondary School by offer an oportuinity for all to socialise in an informal setting. We hope to also (45)  promote school spirit and reinforce the important of good sportsmanship.

Since this event is open to all of you and your friends and family, the activities will be fun and (46)  (47)  aksessible for people of all age groups. The emphasis will be at recreation rather than atheletik (48)  competition. However, there will also be matches of popular sports for people who prefer more challenging activities.

(49)  (50)

We look forward to your support. Thank you for advance for your participate!

Yours sincerely,

Sam Lim

Student Chairman of the School Fundraising Committee

Maya Penn, 14 years old, founded her eco-fashion line, Maya's Ideas, when she was eight years old. She has spent a huge chunk of the past six (51) _____ designing and hand-making clothing and accessories out of organic cotton, hemp, bamboo, silk and wool. "No matter how big my (52) _____ grows," she says, "I will always use eco-friendly (53) _____ to make the products."

She (54) _____ 10 to 20 percent of her company's profits to non-profit organisations that she admires. In 2011, when she had too many ideas to contain them in a clothing line, she founded her own non-profit (55) _____, 'Maya's Ideas for the Planet', which promotes other eco-friendly practices.

Maya is not doing all this in a vacuum, though. Her sincere (56) _____ is to inspire others. Maya's message is that you (yes, you!) can (57) _____ a difference, no matter how small. We do not all have to design clothing lines and start non-profit organisations by the time we're 14!

A few years ago, when she (58) _____ about a local reuse-and-recycle event in the newspapers, she made flyers to put up around the city even though she was not the organiser. Now, she regularly visits (59) _____ to talk to students about environmental issues. Fortunately for the planet, (60) _____ creativity and zest for life is focussed on environmental preservation. She has written two children's books with environmental messages. These are printed on recycled (61) _____.

In addition, Maya already grasps a key insight that almost every environmentalist has in (62) _____ or her life: If there's inaction, it's not because we're apathetic. It's (63) _____ we're overwhelmed. She says that during her school visits, she has met "a lot of young people who care but don't know what to do. What's going on in the environment seems like such a big matter that they feel they have to perform a big action, and they don't know what that action should be.

It is a self-fulfilling prophecy: this fear that whatever we do is too (64) _____ to matter. "The reason it seems like there's nothing happening," she says, "is because people are scared to do anything they think won't have results.

"A small action (65) _____ to a big change," she insists. "It has a ripple effect, whether that person knows it. You may be scared but you don't need to have a ton of confidence to do something."

Greeting us with a smile and a hearty handshake, he walked into the room in the Singapore Sports Hub. From the start, we could feel the enthusiasm and sense of warmth in this man with an unfailing smile on his face and an impish twinkle in his eyes. Rahim Resad, previously a school sports trainer who became a semi-professional cyclist, had ridden his bicycle in many places.
He was in the midst of packing his bags for his year-long two-wheeler trip from Norway to Singapore when we caught up with him. Just before his departure, we interviewed him. As he shared his experiences with us, we questioned ourselves whether we had as much resilience as he does.	5
"How and when did you first take cycling seriously?" I ventured to ask.
He explained that that was in 2008 after his doctor's advice to shed some weight as his health had been deteriorating. "I was overweight and diagnosed with arterial disease, to name but two of many problems. Of course I was panicky. I brought my old rusty bike out for a spin, and couldn't go for more than 5km without struggling to breathe. I realised how serious it was. I went home to draft a fitness plan and executed that for a straight three months."	10
When asked if his childhood experiences had played a part in developing his passion in adventure and cycling, the response was excited, "I grew up cycling practically everywhere. A group of us children had our mini-cycling adventures. We explored places on our bikes and went to places in the neighbourhood. Once, my friends and I found an old sword on a trail without expecting it! We didn't know what to do with it at first. But we passed it to a police post. When I began cycling again in 2008, those old memories returned to me. The dream to go far and see the world on a bike came into my mind. Although my fitness was not up to the mark, I put my mind to it and trained hard to make the dream come true."	15
He drank the water from his bottle, and told us about his cycling adventure to the interior of Borneo. "My Borneo trip started from Kota Kinabalu in Sabah, to Brunei, Miri in Sarawak, all the way to Kuching, before continuing in Lundu. That was the end of Sarawak and I crossed over the border into Kalimantan. From there, I rode to the east of Kalimantan and took a boat into Tarakan. Then, I exited Kalimantan and went to Tawau, in Sabah. I rode for ten days to arrive at where I had started, Kota Kinabalu. It took that long to make just one round, cycling on the third largest island in the world, Borneo!"	20
"I learned about the locals in Borneo. What I learned was contradictory to what some others had told me before about the people, that they were dangerous. I remember one incident in Kalimantan. I was riding from Martapura to Tanjung, a distance of 200 kilometres. Towards the midpoint of the journey, a truck came out from a mining site. The truck driver gave a friendly 'honk' and it went on its way. Five minutes later, when the sky was getting darker, I saw the same truck on the side of the road with the driver holding a plastic bag, waving at me to stop. I was exhausted from the blistering heat. He handed me a bag of fried chicken. It was the best chicken I had throughout my entire stay in Borneo. We chatted for ten more minutes before he drove to the oil palm plantation. I met other strangers who offered me accommodation and guided me to my next stop. There are many other similar stories I can share. Another type of experience was in the forests of Borneo. I had perspired a lot. There was no clean water in the area and I was alone. I went without bathing during that whole period which lasted five days. I resorted to drying my only jersey in the sun and wearing it back again every day during that period in the forests. I felt cleaner that way!"	30
He had travelled mostly in parts of poor villages. Having seen their living conditions and	35

having stayed and dined with many of them, he said that it had been hard for him to just get out of there and pretend that he had not seen anything. He expounded on this to us, "It was an incredible journey of understanding and discovery. I learned that the poor are always willing to give and give more than the rich. I wasn't expecting to break the world record or anything along those lines. I did not even think of having a life-changing experience. However, I got to know people of different cultures and perspectives. I felt guilty, to be honest, to be home knowing there are people who needed help. They have nothing to offer me but their food and shelter. They did, and they made sure I was all right."

45

Our interviewee had mixed feelings about his next solo cycling adventure from Norway to Singapore. "On one hand," he spoke, "I am looking forward to doing this. On the other hand, I know the danger is real. Cycling on the road over 20,000 kilometres is in itself dangerous. In addition, in some sections, I'll be cycling in very cold winter. Then again, anything bad could happen to me in the comfort of my own home. So, like what Mark Twain (a famous writer) said, sail away from the safe harbour and explore the unfamiliar."
